Desiring an expression of the people, regardless of their former party affiliations regarding public affairs, which interest our people more than the packing of primaries and conventions by democratic and republican ringmasters, we have made the apportionment so that every one who has the time and inclination to be present can do so without first consulting a self-appointed boss and thereby lowering his self-respect. The populist party is a western and southern party, representing the interests of the people, in favor of the free coinage of silver on a basis of 16 to 1, and every true American who loves his home and family better than old party traditions is requested to participate in the proceedings.

Those in sympathy with the populist movement are requested to hold primaries Saturday, Sept. 29th, and all delegations are requested to report at the Fremont house in Silver City on Friday evening, Oct. 5th. S. S. Burchfield, Chairman Ex. Com. President H. Deming.

AFTER DINNER ORATORS.

Most Englishmen Are Failures as Such, but Coleridge Was a shining Exception.

Lord Coleridge had a record as the best English after dinner speaker who ever came to America. As a rule, the Englishman does not shine posthumously in comparison with the average Americans of the same grade in law, politics, literature, the drama or journalism. Most of them, in fact, are failures. Coleridge and Irving are the shining exceptions. Sergeant Ballantyne, who came with a great flourish of trumpets and was received with much cordiality by his professional brethren, was the worst that we ever had to endure. Martin Farquhar Tupper was insufferably dull. Toole, the comedian, who was considered funny on the other side, was lugubrious here. It took several sessions to break in Wilson Barrett. Lord Aberdeen is genial, but prosy.

Dickens was the best man who professed Coleridge, but to the present generation of diners he is only a tradition and does not count. Sir Richard Webster, I fancy, would have shown himself a good second to Lord Coleridge, but his visit here was short, and very few had the pleasure of hearing him. I had that pleasure here as well as in England, and he certainly has a remarkable facility of expression, combined with a fine vocabulary, a keen sense of humor and a thorough knowledge of human nature. Coleridge, however, I repeat, took the palm and his work is in the memory of friends whom he met here to this day.—Chilengro Inter Ocean.

Discovered.

There were many queer characters in Ballantyne's printing house in Edinburgh, and one of them declared that he knew who wrote the Waverley novels.

"almost as soon as the master Mr. James Ballantyne.

"I had just begun a new sheet of 'Guy Mannering,'" he would say, "one night awhile after 12, and all the compositors had left, when in comes Mr. Ballantyne himself, with a letter in his hand and a lot o' types.

"I am going to make a small alteration, Sandy," said he, "unlock the form, will you? I'll not keep you many minutes."

"Well, I did, as I was bidden, and Mr. Ballantyne looked at the letter and altered three lines on one page and one line on another.

"That will do now, Sandy, I think," were his words, and off he went, never thinking he had left the letter lying on my bank. I had barely time to get a glimpse at it when he came back, but I kept the hand wad and the signature, and it was 'Walter Scott.' I had a great long ballant (ballad) in Sir Walter's ain hand o' write at home, so that I was moe stranger to it. So, you see, gentlemen, I kent the grand secret when it was a secret!"—Youth's Companion.

Bought His Tie in a Pawnshop.

A funny thing which is just leaking out happened at the recent Sherman wedding in Boston. A man who was a prominent guest, in looking over the presents at the house, discovered a valuable old clock, an antique, that he had bought abroad for a big sum and had been stolen from his house a year or more before in some mysterious way. He hunted up the donor and found he had bought it from a pawnbroker that had called his attention to it as a rare article. The man wanted to give Miss Sherman something rare and so purchased it. It was not, however, until owner No. 1 insisted upon the right of first proprietorship that owner No. 2 was willing to explain. It was rather a big joke on him to have bought a pawnbroker's shop for his wedding present, and the first man thought it too good a story to keep.—Town Topics.

Dr. Pierce was under doctor's care for two years with gout disease, and gradually got well with the help of the medicine. It was so weak that I could sit up in bed only a few moments, for I had to go to the toilet taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription and his Golden Medicine. I am now perfectly well and have good health ever since—that was two years and a half ago."

Artificially Red Oranges.

Blood oranges are now prepared artificially. They are even richer in flavor than the natural red orange of nature.

An ordinary orange is punctured, and a small quantity of California claret is injected. It means a powerful syrup. The pulp is drawn up through the pulp of the fruit by means of the capillary attraction and gives the orange the deep red so admired by connoisseurs.—New York Herald.
